

Disability-Led Supports Across the Lifespan: The Role of Centers for Independent Living

Centers for Independent Living (CILs) are disability-led organizations run by professionals with lived experience of disability.

Discover how CILs:

- Partner with individuals to navigate the systems, while fostering independence through interdependence
- Help children, youth and adults build self-advocacy skills, strengthen community connections, and successfully navigate critical life transitions from an early age
- Prioritize disability-led supports that lead to more equitable effective outcomes across the lifespan
